SIERRA MADRE, LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1920.

VOL. 15, NO. 7

FOURTH ANNUAL ROLL CALL OF AMERICAN RED CROSS

The Fourth Annual Roll Call of the local Red Cross was begun yesterday and will be in full swing until the 25th of the month, inclusive.

From the 11th to the 15th, inclusive, has been set aside as volunteer days, when it is hoped that as many as possible will call at the local Red Cross room in the Rainier hotel on North Baldwin and sign up for their membership.

It is hoped that Sierra Madre will respond as usual to this worthy cause and help to swell the fund that will be used in the local relief work of Sierra Madre for this year. Fifty per cent of the $1.00 memberships will be retained for this work and the other fifty per cent will go to the general Red Cross fund. On the $10.00 memberships, $8.00, and on the $5.00 memberships, $4.00, will go to the local relief fund.

Persons living in Sierra Madre Canyon tract will be able to subscribe daily at the store of Myers & Goodwin, and J. B. Foreman.

The headquarters of the local Red Cross at the Rainier hotel and the above mentioned places in the Canyon district will be open daily from 9:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and Saturdays (till 8:30 p. m.); on Sundays, 2 to 5 p. m.

ROBERT MITCHELL,
Chairman.

NEW OFFICIALS OF LOCAL RED CROSS CHAPTER

Following is the new list of officers and directors as recently elected to serve for the current year:

Robert Mitchell, chairman; Mrs. W. E. Walker, vice-chairman; Herbert Ingraham, treasurer; Mrs. J. H. Wright, secretary.

Board of directors: Mrs. J. T. Mason, Mrs. M. D. Welsher, Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Jr., Mrs. Louis Dietz, Miss Edith Blumer, Miss Daisy Hawks, Miss Florie Vannier, Mrs. E. C. Newton, Mrs. W. H. Ingraham, Robert Mitchell.

INVITES MEMBERS OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Chamber of Commerce of San Pedro will have a big blow-out Saturday, Nov. 27, for neighboring chambers of commerce and in sending an invitation to the Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce, I. G. Lewis, secretary, says:

"The ladies, God bless 'em, are to be given special treatment by a special committee of folks who will see that they have a chance to meet some of the gallant officers of the navy on their own decks. It will be a case of us poor sinners tagging our women folk, for we all know these birds are go-getters.

"Some of you were here Cabrillo day and you know what my gang can do when they set themselves to entertain the strangers within our gates. With a smaller bunch of visitors, you can reasonably expect a wind up for 1920 that will be a hummer.

"As for cats—I promise nothing—don't have to—you know me, Al."

"I shall prepare for the whole bunch, so you don't need to notify me you can't come—just tell me how many you will bring with you. 'Nuff sed."

Sierra Madre members wishing to attend will please notify the secretary.

LOSS BY FIRE.

Last Saturday evening a one room house in the back of Sam Wheeler's house burned to the ground. The fire originated from a red hot stove. As soon as the blaze was discovered, neighbors rushed to assist, but were unable to save anything except a trunk and some bedding.

DEATH OF OTIS LOCKHART

The sudden and unexpected demise of Otis J. Lockhart last Saturday from heart failure came as a shock to his many friends and acquaintances here.

Mr. Lockhart, who was 61 years of age, was actively engaged as a realty operator, both here and in Los Angeles. He was the owner of Cypress Court, which property he had acquired several years ago and upon which he made extensive improvements, building up that section of the city. He had previously opened up numerous subdivisions in Los Angeles city. He also took a keen interest in politics, but never held public office.

Many of his friends remember his deeds of charity, which he performed in a quiet and unassuming manner.

Mr. Lockhart was a native of Indiana. He settled in California many years ago, coming to Sierra Madre about the year 1913.

He leaves a wife and two daughters, Ethel Lockhart Chapman and Kathleen Lockhart Manning, a well known vocalist and music teacher of Southern California. Other immediate relatives are his mother, 81 years of age, and an unmarried sister, Miss Fannie Lockhart.

His remains were cremated at Forest Lawn Cemetery at Glendale, on Monday.

FALLS FROM ROOF

John Basting fell from the roof of his house last Thursday while painting and in falling struck on both arms, which resulted in the fracturing of the bone in one arm, and badly bruising the other. It will be a week or more before he will be able to continue his work.

A BIG CLOCK

Frank Fraiberg has installed a giant clock in his jewelry store that is the latest thing in an elaborate time piece.

At the hour and each quarter it plays a tune on chimes before striking.

Frank says it is intended for somebody's Christmas present, but he does not know whose—yet.

NEW NURSE ON DUTY

Miss Mary A. Young, new city nurse, would be glad to receive old papers, magazines or anything that could be converted into money for local relief.

Miss Young has been on duty since the resignation of Miss Brewington, and is trying to follow out the same regime.

a wonderful table full of bags of all kinds and many surprises are in store for the early buyer.

The book table full of new and used books, reasonably priced far below the market value, will be under the able direction of Mrs. Lee Lyon, assisted by Mrs. Pettis of New York.

The decorations will be in the capable hands of Mrs. F. P. Sperry, who has a wealth of beautiful flowers at her command.

And now for the supper, under the management of Miss Florence Vannier, Mrs. M. D. Welcher, Mrs. J. A. Appleby and Miss Mary Fay of Pasadena. This alone will be a drawing card. The supper will be served each evening from 5:30 till 7:00 o'clock and will consist of the following menu:

Clam chowder, meat croquettes, macaroni, green string beans, rolls, coffee, chili sauce and pickles, ice cream and cake.

The dining room will be in charge of Mrs. W. R. Lees and Mrs. Louis Brooks.

During both afternoons of the bazaar an informal program of music has been arranged and will be presented by local talent. For the afternoon of the 18th, Master Bob Mitchell clever child pianist, will play two numbers. Mrs. F. L. C. Roess will sing "Rainbows," by Hawley, accompanied by Miss Frances Webster; a duet by Mrs. Hawks and Mrs. Havxhurst, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Charles Klunk, with Miss Webster accompanying.

The program arranged for Friday afternoon will include piano numbers by Miss Webster; solo by Mrs. Donald Ashmore, and Mrs. J. N. Hawks, contralto, will sing one of her popular numbers.

The public is invited to hear these programs, there being no charge, and together with the attraction of the many things offered for sale at the various booths, will be a great drawing card. Both programs will begin about 3:30, an hour later than the opening.

The comedy in three acts entitled, "The Importance of Being Earnest," will be presented on both nights by the following local actors:

Misses Helen Williams and Yelda Appleby, Meses. J. N. Hawks, and H. E. Allen; Meses. E. P. Rhodes, C. H. Perry, J. N. Hawks, J. H. Wright and Dr. Chester Brown.

Mrs. F. P. Sperry, Miss Martha Howell and Miss Hilda Caley will preside over the Red Cross booth.

Dancing will follow the performance Friday night.

TESTS MEAT FOR SWEETNESS

Olfactory Nerves of the "Ham Smeller" Must Be Always at Their Keenest.

To the long list of unusual occupations by which men live, there must be added that of the "ham smeller" in a packing house. His duty is to inspect meat products and judge of their soundness.

The ham smeller's only tools are a long steel trier and his nose. He stands in a barrel to keep his clothes from being soiled by the dripping brine, and the hams are brought to him by workmen. A ham is laid before him, and he plunges his sharp-pointed trier into it, withdraws it and passes it swiftly beneath his nose. The trier always goes down to the knuckle joint.

In testing meat in that manner the man with the trier judges by the slightest shade of difference between the smell of one piece of meat and another. The smell of the meat is almost universally sweet, and that is what he smells; the slightest taint or deviation from the sweet smell is therefore appreciable. It is not the degree of taint that he expects to find, but the slightest odor that is not sweet.

When he detects an odor he throws the meat aside, and if it is not unwholesome, it is sold as "rejected" meat, but if it is tainted it goes to the rendering tank. The ham tester smells meat from 7 o'clock in the morning until 5 at night, and his sense must never become jaded or inexact, or his usefulness would be at an end.

Ham testing is not a pursuit dangerous to the health, as tea testing is supposed to be, but the ham smeller with a cold in his head is for the time being like a piano player who has lost his arms in a railway wreck.

Why He Liked That Club.

Bret Harte, though he was the historian of the "Argonauts of 1849," had no real love of yachting. Yet his favorite resort during the last years of his life was the Royal Thames Yacht club. He was once questioned about it, and explained:

"I never use a club until I am tired of my work, and want relief from it. If I go to a literary club I am asked all sorts of questions as to what I am doing, and my views on somebody else's last book, and to these I am expected to reply at length.

"Now, my good friends in Albemarle street talk of their yachts, don't want my advice about them, are good enough to let me listen, and I come away refreshed by their conversation."

Seamen's Watches.

In the time division of the 24 hours of the day into watches on board ships at sea there are five watches of four hours each and two of two hours, every watch having its distinctive name. Beginning at noon, the afternoon watch is from 12 m. to 4 p. m.; first dog watch, 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.; second dog watch, 6 p. m. to 8 p. m.; night watch, 8 p. m. to 12 midnight; middle watch, 12 midnight to 4 a. m.; morning watch, 4 a. m. to 8 a. m.; forenoon watch, 8 a. m. to noon.

Impertinent Petitions.

When we are invited to a banquet we take what is set before us; and were one to call upon his host to set fish upon the table or sweet things, he would be deemed absurd. Yet, in a word, we ask the gods for what they do not give; and that, although they have given us so many things!—From "The Golden Sayings of Epictetus."

EARLY SELF-PROPELLED VEHICLE

Another stage in the history of the automobile was unearthed recently when Gabriel Pollock, in searching through some old relics, came upon what Achille Philon, who invented it in 1893, maintains is the first self-propelled vehicle to appear in the streets of Chicago. As a park lizard it was some boat in those days.

STOP END PLAY IN CRANKSHAFT

Bronze Washer Placed Between Bearing and Flywheel Will Overcome Difficulty.

DIAGRAM EXPLAINS DETAILS

Where Screws Pass Through Halves of Washer the Lower Part Is Filed Flat to Permit Fitting of Little Iron Strips.

It is not always practical for one to replace the main bearings or the caps in an engine which is giving no trouble except for a slight end play in the crankshaft.

Although any end play in this member is destructive to both the engine and the transmission, it seems a pity to spend time in fitting new bearing caps, and so the following suggestion is given to obviate the trouble.

To Obviate Trouble. Measure the clearance between the last or rear bearing and the flange on the end of the crankshaft, and dress off the end of this last bearing until approximately one-quarter-inch play clearance at this point is obtained. Next fit a bronze washer so that it will compensate for this clearance and have a hole in it one-eighth inch larger than the shaft. Cut the washer into two pieces with a hacksaw, then fit two machine screws to hold the two parts together. This split washer may then be placed over the crankshaft between the bearing and the flywheel flange, and will compensate for end play.

End play in an automobile crankshaft can be prevented by placing a bronze washer over the crankshaft between the bearing and flywheel.

Illustration Explains.

Upon referring to the illustration, one will note that where the retaining screws pass through the halves of the washer, the lower part has been filed flat. This is to permit the fitting of a flat piece of iron between the head of the screw and the washer. This latter piece of iron should be clamped beneath the head of the bearing-cap retaining bolt and will prevent the washer from rattling.—Popular Science Monthly.

WHEN VACUUM TANK FIZZLES

Possible to Get Up Enough Pressure Temporarily to Feed Fuel by Blowing in Line.

When the vacuum tank falls on the road, it is possible to get up enough pressure temporarily to feed the fuel by blowing in the main fuel line. By repeating this process every quarter of a mile enough fuel will be fed to get the car to a garage where repairs can be made.

MOTOR POWER TRANSMISSION

Invention That Enables Driver to Change Speed Without Breaking Connection.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a power transmission invention of G. L. Jacques of Neillville, Wis., says:

This invention relates generally to transmission of power and more particularly to a power transmission for motor vehicles, the primary object being a power transmission which will enable the changing of speed without breaking the power connection between the motor and the drive wheels. A further object is the provision of a friction power transmission in which greater bearing is provided and maintained between the driving and driven friction members.

WORN TIRES ARE EXPENSIVE

Slight Gain Effectuated Is More Than Off-set by Excessive Deterioration of Wheels.

The slight gain effected by using badly worn tires is much more than offset by the excessive deterioration of the wheels, motor and transmission, not to mention breakdowns or serious wrecks. It would be a good thing if truck makers generally suggested to their customers the advisability of not attempting to secure further mileage after the tires have worn down.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

King Albert of Belgium is an experienced motorist.

There are 2,400 to 2,500 parts in the popular-priced touring car.

Canada and the United States have together some 8,000,000 motor vehicles.

Automobile manufacturers are planning to standardize hub sizes to any and all wheels.

In filling the gearset put in the lubricant to a depth of about half the height of the gearbox.

A car that is driven on a fixed throttle will show lower fuel consumption than one driven on variable throttle movement.

Surprising as it may seem, the first automobile was built and tested half a century before the first railroad track was laid.

Mileage capacity of a motortruck varies according to make and purposes for which it is used and manner in which it is handled.

Automobile tires are wrapped in paper by the manufacturers because tire makers know that sunlight and air sap the strength of rubber.

During the active running season it is a good plan to test the wheels for side play once a month. Side play causes excessive bearing wear and tire wear as well.

Take a shovel for emergencies and also a tow-rope. You may have to be pulled out of a ditch at the side of the road, or you may want to help out someone else.

Sluggard Satisfied He Had an Admirable Excuse for Refusing to Be Up and About.

"Arise!" we said in a tone admirably adapted for declamatory purposes, addressing the sluggard, who was still slugging at an unconsciously, late hour. "The lark is up to meet the sun. The bee is on the wing. Remember the manner in which the experienced school boy read aloud the admonition to Lucy. He had been taught that when he encountered two letters of the same kind he should pronounce them 'double-o,' or whatever they might be, instead of 'o,' 'o.' So he sternly recited, but 'Double up, Lucy! The sun is in the sky,' and so forth. Why do you not double up, and to your tasks away?"

"That is a very good story," replied the sluggard, "but it does not move me. We are told that nature does most of her repair work on us while we are in bed. It is my intention to lie here until she fixes me up so that I feel like going to work."—Kansas City Star.

PLEASURE HAD SAD ENDING

Four in a Tub, With Soiled Clothing, Too Much for the Patience of Mother.

My young brother Billie was mischievous, and had to be watched carefully. Mother was busy making a birthday gift one afternoon, and Johnny and I were playing near her, with our dog Jim.

Suddenly mother said: "Where's Billie?"

We said we didn't know, so were sent to find him. I looked everywhere. When I came to the bathroom, there was Billie in the tub which he'd filled with water, and he had his clothes on. "C'm in," he said, and I scrambled in too.

We were enjoying ourselves immensely when in came Johnny, dragging the dog Jim. He managed to get Jim and himself in the tub, and we all had a fine time splashing.

Suddenly mother entered. "Out of that tub," she ordered. We got out. "Undress and go to bed at once." We went, supperless.—Exchange.

Styles in New Gowns in Paris

Silhouette to Remain Same as It Has Been for Some Time Past.

VARIOUS FORMS OF TRIMMING

Shapings of Necklines and Waistlines, Drapings of Skirts, Shaping of Bodices, Among Fine Points of Finished Outfit.

Two gowns—one from Lanvin and one from Worth—show something of the style aims of the coming season. Paris says that, with devious variations to prove the rule, the silhouette shall remain virtually the same as it has been for some time past. It is to the details of formation and construction that the artists in dress are bending the utmost of their talent. There seems to be no end, writes a fashion correspondent, to the new forms of trimming, the novel shapings of necklines and waistlines, the drapings of skirts, the shaping of bodices, the handling of lace and the general usage of all the fine points which go to make up a finished gown.

While the Parisians are generally considered to be at the lowest ebb of their art when handling the making of suits, still in the one which Worth has designed there is every sign of all that is to be desired. The skirt is long and full enough in its width to make it comfortable for walking purposes. The bodice exhibits a slightly more advanced tendency, which gives it a new swing above the line of the hips. The waistline is long, reaching toward the hips, and there it is further augmented by tucks that are interestingly grouped. The fur is not too lavishly used and still it serves to accentuate the line and to add to the color combination, which, in this instance, is an antique green velvet cloth with black fur. The sleeves are an interesting feature of this not strictly tailored suit, for they spread open slightly at the wrists and allow the trimming to take its way up the arm until it approaches the elbow.

The French people believe, always that a suit which deviates slightly from the strictly tailored variety is much better style than the one which adheres too closely to all of the masculine characteristics. They insist that it is, in the end, a more attractively feminine thing if it always keeps in mind the fact that it is to be worn by a woman. And surely their suits remain as practical as ours, which must be more closely fitted, more hardy tailored. In some ways they may be worn for a greater length of time, for the unevenness of their design allows some slight imperfections to exist without being too broadly visible.

As for the Parisian idea of all that is lovely in woman's attire, there is the little Lanvin model for pertinent comparison. That has all the softness, transparency and grace that they consider essentials of a woman's gowning.

The materials are black tulle and tulle, and the little flowers which are scattered carelessly over the surface of the tulle overdress are made of cleverly twisted pieces of the tulle with golden centers. No, there is nothing decidedly new about this charmingly simple frock, but its character is fine and its tone is one of beauty—in all that the French seem to be demanding for a standard.

Much lace continues to be seen on the dresses that have been exhibited at the Parisian races, where all the style tendencies of the season to come are put forward. One of the newest dresses seen at this time had a foundation of figured silk made in chemise fashion, with quite short sleeves and a rounded neck. There was a lace cape over the back and a lace underskirt that showed for a space of about five inches beneath the silk hem of the gown. It was a graceful thing, with the straightest of silhouette lines, but with the airiness and floating quality that lace gives.

Chemise Dress Holds Own.

The chemise dress, indeed, holds its own in a most remarkable way. Those who are returning from Paris say that nothing else can be seen on the boulevards. Sometimes they are embroidered over every inch of the surface that shows, sometimes they are merely trimmed with inconspicuous though cleverly designed rows of embroidered stitching, sometimes the embroidery displays itself in solidly worked bands of bright colorings, and, again, the chemise frock is made of simple, plainly woven and plainly colored silk or satin that has nothing but its line—its artistic and studied line—to recommend it for more than passing attention. A favorite method of embroidering the chemise frock is to carry the stitchings (hand stitchings they must be to be right) from the hem of the gown to the hip line and then to allow the rest of the gown to remain plain and unadorned, with only a string belt to suggest the place where a waistline might be located.

The cape, or some variation of the cape, is still popular among the Parisians. The cuts of these capes are as diversified as the trimmings of the chemise frocks, but always they retain the same lines—straight, except for a place at the front where they are hugged about the figure. A few of the newer capes have sort of blousy tops with skirt section joined to them down about the legs or quite under the hips. These, with their collars of fur, or with furry edgings, are the most graceful of outer coverings.

Evening frocks continue to be draped and draped and then draped again. A Parisian designer recognizes no law in these her noblest works of art, but she regards the figure and what is best suited to it. Some of the results are more perfect than others; a few have positive marks of genius.

Brocades are Popular

Many brocades are seen among the newest evening gowns, and these are draped always at a new angle and in a new way. Generally speaking, it is said that the skirts of evening gowns are longer, but here a strange breaking of the rule occurs, for many of them are long at one side and shorter than ever at the other, while others are so constructed that the front and back vie with each other in unevenness of length. For the brocades there is no trimming. They are enough in themselves, and as the materials increase in beauty and richness, so do the designs, until the whole effect is something to wonder at. A draped evening gown is made of the heaviest of black satin and is held about the figure in sweeping curves.

Lace for evening gowns is quite the thing. A lace evening gown is made with tiers of flounces for the skirt, and with a low backed lacey bodice having only suggestions of short and lacey sleeves. The lace is black and is made over heavy black satin; then under the fine meshes somewhere about the bodice a folded, draped

The KITCHEN CABINET

If we would do something worth while we must first realize that we must be something. We must be able to think, plan, create, not be a mere echo of what someone else has done.—Lloyd.

CHESTNUT DISHES.

Chestnuts are the favorite nut in the autumn, and when plentiful may be used freely in various dishes, being both nutritious and reasonable in price.

Chestnut Glace.—Boil two cupsfuls of sugar, one cupful of water and a pinch of cream of tartar to a caramel stage or until of a yellowish tinge. Dip the whole nuts, already shelled and blanched, into the hot sirup, using a sharp skewer for dipping; a batpin is a most convenient dipper. Put on paraffin paper to drain and dry.

In roasting chestnuts before an open fire, the small ends should always be well slit, that they may not burst too violently with the heat. A corn-popper is a safe method of roasting them—better than a shovel or open dish. If to be baked, place them on a perforated dish in a hot oven and bake them until they are thoroughly mealy—about ten minutes.

Chestnut Pancakes.—Beat separately the yolks of three eggs and the whites of two; add three-fourths of a cupful of cream, a tablespoonful each of butter and sugar with sufficient flour to make a batter. Drop on a hot griddle and put together when baked in pairs with a chestnut filling between, or they may be rolled with the filling spread on the cake.

Chestnut Pudding.—Blanch a pint of chestnuts, halve them and cook three-quarters of an hour with half a pint of milk, letting them simmer until soft. Press through a sieve, add one-half cupful of sugar, a little salt, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, a grating of nutmeg. Beat the yolks of three eggs, add to the chestnut pulp, then fold in the well-beaten whites. Put into a pudding dish and bake fifteen minutes; serve hot or cold with cream or a thin custard.

Chantilly Chestnuts.—Pierce one pound of chestnuts and put them into boiling water and cook for three-quarters of an hour; peel carefully, pass through a potato ricer, sprinkle with sugar, add a bit of vanilla and pile the whole on a plate. Pour over whipped cream sweetened and flavored, and garnish with crystallized apricots.

He came up smiling—used to say He made his fortune that a-way. I had hard luck a-plenty, too, But settled down and fought her through. And every time he got a jolt He fist took on a tighter hold. Slipped back some when he tried to climb, But came up smiling every time. —James W. Foley.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS.

For those who are fond of cheese, the following recipe will be enjoyed:

Cheese Savory.—Soften a cake of cream cheese; put it in a bowl which has been rubbed with a clove of garlic; add a tablespoonful of softened butter, one teaspoonful of chopped olives, half a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, one-third of a teaspoonful each of Worcestershire sauce and anchovy paste. Season with salt, pepper and paprika and pack closely in a glass mold. Turn onto a plate when firm. Serve with toasted crackers.

Spinach Timbales.—Chop fine a generous cupful of cooked spinach. Press it through a sieve; melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, cook in it two tablespoonfuls of flour; add a dash of cayenne, salt and paprika and three-quarters of a cupful of milk; stir until the mixture boils. Then add the spinach puree, two well beaten eggs and more seasoning, if needed. Mix the whole thoroughly and cook in timbale molds, well buttered, until the centers are firm.

Rhubarb Pie.—Bake in two crusts the following mixture: Take one cupful of chopped rhubarb, one cupful of sugar, one large cracker, rolled, and a tablespoonful of butter. Bake as usual.

Orange Wafers.—Cream one-quarter of a cupful of butter; add one-half cupful of sugar, one egg, well beaten, the grated rind of an orange, two tablespoonfuls of orange juice, a teaspoonful of baking powder sifted with one cupful of flour. Mix and oil thin; cut with a small cutter and bake in a hot oven.

MARKETING.

"It is surprising," said Mr. Robin, "how many creatures forget that they're not the only ones who go marketing."

"Ladies go to the shops and they think they're the only ones who see that their families are fed. But they're not at all. Of course they are most important and so are their families, and I wouldn't say they weren't, for it wouldn't be so."

"But still, others go to the markets too, even though they may not all go to the same ones. And it is a good thing they don't, for the shopkeepers and the grocers and butchers would run out of the foodstuffs they had to sell."

"Now, all of the robins go a-marketing. We Robins are very good at it. And most of the gentlemen birds do the marketing when the mother birds are watching over the eggs and the little birdlings."

"That is so," agreed Mrs. Robin, "the dear father birds are splendid about looking after the food for the home when we're busy guarding the nests and seeing that the eggs hatch out into dear little birdlings."

"And you always know where to get the best worms."

"To be sure," said Mr. Robin, "and that is what I meant when I said that though we did not go to the same markets as people we went marketing, too."

"What a horrible thing it would be if people did come to the lawns and began digging up all the worms! Gracious, the poor birds would have a dreadful time!"

"But they don't do that any more than we go to the grocery stores and tell the grocer to please do us up a package of potatoes and another of onions, and one more of meat which we'd order at the meat shop."

"Then there are many of the birds who eat the insects and bugs which the people do not want around which would destroy the trees. We help, too.

"So when such birds are marketing they are not only taking what people do not want and get what they do want for their meals, but they are taking something which people are very glad to get rid of."

"That is why many people see that we are looked after in the summer when it is hot by giving us water and in the cooler weather by giving us crumbs when food is harder to get."

"They say that they do that to reward us for the work we do for them. That's a nice thought, isn't it?"

"And then there are many other animals who all go marketing but they all have different markets where they go, such as the bears who love berries which they find in the woods and so those are their best markets."

"Every animal, every bird, every creature must go to market or have some one go to market for them, for every creature must live, and we have to eat to live."

"Did you just find that out, Mr. Robin?" asked Mrs. Robin.

She chuckled, and Mr. Robin came up and hopped along beside her.

"Making fun of your little mate, eh?"

"Not a bit of it," said Mrs. Robin, "just joking and having a little fun. But you're right. Sometimes people do think they're the only ones who go to market and who have to see about feeding their families."

"It is the same, too, as you say, among the animals and the birds and the people, among the fish and the fowls, and the creatures who are big and the creatures who are small."

"Yes," said Mr. Robin, "marketing is something we all do but a good many of us are for different kinds of things to eat—which is—as I have said, extremely lucky; yes, extremely lucky. In this way the lawns don't run short of worms as they otherwise might do."

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

CITY SCOUTS IN "HOLD-UP"

When the five boy scouts who were chosen by contest to represent the five boroughs of Greater New York to tour the great national parks as guests of the Far Western Travelers' association were departing from New York, John B. Patton, president of the association, said he regretted that the city boys would not be able to see life as it was in the early days of highwaymen. One of the boys remarked: "Don't mind that, Mr. Patton, we know the wild west has been tamed and that there are more 'hold ups' right here at home every week than there are out there in a year, only we don't very often see them."

However, the five city boys did get the thrill of their lives when they were actually held up by a highwayman before their trip was half over. This was near the end of July when the boys were on their way to Yosemite park. Scout Herbert Jacob, thirteen years old, the youngest member of the party, sent the following description of their experience to Scout Executive Worden, of the Queen county council, which he represents:

"We had some wonderful adventures in Yosemite park. At Merced we boarded the stage for Glacier Point. Before arriving in the big tree district we encountered a log lying across the road. Behind it was a man with a wicked-looking shot-gun leveled right at our heads. Gee! the bore looked as big as an apple. The man was dressed in blue overalls, with a dirty blue serge jacket over them. He was about 55 years old and was not very large. He ordered 'hands up.' Of course we willingly obeyed."

"Just then our driver recovered his wits and said: 'Aw, Boss, they're only a bunch of Boy Scouts.' After giving as the once over (we do not know what was going on in his mind), and probably feeling a spark of patriotism, he told us to put our hands down, but warned the driver not to move. In a few minutes the two other stages arrived on the scene and we had the pleasure of seeing the occupants line up and 'shell out.' The bandit must have been about $400 richer when he made his getaway. Think of it, a hold-up in these years! It was just our luck to have it, too."

SCOUTS AT OLYMPIC GAMES.

The 300 or more Boy Scouts of America who toured France and Belgium following the recent world scouts "Jamboree" in England, spent only one day in Antwerp, Belgium, but it was the liveliest and "loudest" day of their whole speedy and noisy European trip. That was August 17th, the second day of the Olympic games, when the American athletes made their first sensational strides in the smashing of world records, and it was just the scout delegation's luck to be there that day. They were given the distinction of acting as the guard of honor to King Albert on the way to the games, and, as guests of the Olympic committee, had choice seats in the American section of the vast stadium. The cable dispatches of that day in describing the scene following the unfurling of the Stars and Stripes at the peak of the "honor pole" and announcement of the wonderful performance of our athletes said:

"There was a wild burst of enthusiasm from the whole audience punctuated with an organized yell of the American rooting party, which was augmented this day by a large contingent of Boy Scouts of America. The crowd in the American section went wild. Men and women flung their hats in the air and shouted, cheered, sung and screamed. But by far the wildest lot of enthusiasts was that body of boy scouts who had just arrived from the London jamboree. The section was a sea of tossing figures as the scouts stood on their seats and roared their delight."

SCOUT SAVES MOTHER AND PET.

Scout Melvin Peterkin of Troop 2, Woodhaven, L. I., awoke to find the garret of the house where he lived with his mother a-fire and burning fiercely. He shouted to his mother, in the next room, to flee. She refused, not realizing their danger. Melvin argued with her until he saw that the ceiling of her room was beginning to sag. Then he picked his mother up and, though she is twice his weight, bore her bodily to the street. Then, dodging past the firemen, who tried to intercept him, he rushed back into the blazing house and saved his mother's pet canary.

HOW SCOUTS USE SPARE TIME.

During a recent prolonged heavy storm Bronx council scouts, New York City, made all the deliveries for a company that specialized in milk for babies.

In Seattle boy scouts helped in collecting data for the census, volunteering their services and attaching themselves to the re-check bureau of the chamber of commerce, as well as distributing placards urging citizens missed by census-takers to make the fact known.

Weak and Miserable?

Does the least exertion tire you out? Feel "blue" and worried and have daily backache, lameness, headache, dizziness, and kidney irregularities? Sick kidneys are often to blame for this unhappy state. You must act quickly to prevent more serious trouble. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy recommended everywhere by grateful users. Ask your neighbor!

A Utah Case

Mrs. David Christensen, E. First North St., Ephraim, Utah, says: "My back ached dreadfully just over my kidneys and the way my kidneys acted was very annoying. As Doan's Kidney Pills were so highly recommended I bought a box and they cured me of the attack. Since then when I have needed a kidney medicine I have always used Doan's."

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

By Mrs. Palmer Rhodes.

Reciprocity Luncheon Program

Those members of the Sierra Madre Woman's club who were fortunate in securing reservations for the Reciprocity Luncheon, which was given on Monday, Nov. 8, at 1 o'clock, will long cherish it in memory as one of the bright spots in the club's history.

"Never have the club rooms looked more beautiful than on this occasion," was the sentiment expressed by all, when after having been admitted and most graciously received, one found one's self in a very wilderness of color, produced by the clever lighting and the artistic arrangement of various colored flowers and greenery. Following the luncheon which, through the courtesy of Prof. Reynolds, was served by the young ladies of the Eighth grade, and for which plates to the number of 175 were laid, the president, Mrs. F. P. Sperry, spoke a few words of greeting, especially welcoming the out of town guests of whom there were between 75 and 100. Mrs. J. A. Osgood, the much loved "club mother," acted as toastmistress, introducing Mrs. Sidney Thomas Exley, president of the District Federation of Woman's clubs, whose remarks largely followed the trend of a higher standard of home life, making a plea for constructive work in the extension of the race. An added stimulus was furnished by the sincere remarks of greetings from a number of visiting presidents, among whom were Mrs. Dana Weller of the Los Angeles Friday Morning club, Mrs. Cass of the Ebell, Mrs. Leo MacLaughlin of the Pasadena Shakespear club, Mrs. Edward H. Morse of the Lamanda Park Woman's club, and Mrs. J. P. Seymour of the Monrovia Woman's club. The remainder of the afternoon was given over to the enjoyment of a musical program, presented by Erlene DesChaines, soprano, accompanied by Elizabeth Laird Kuzell, both of Los Angeles. The audience seemed indeed thrilled, by the beautiful voice of Mlle. Des Chaines, the clearness and bird like sweetness of whose tones, sympathetically accompanied as they were by Miss Kuzell, could not fail to give unbounded pleasure, and furnished a fitting climax to a day already full of joy.

Mlle. Des Chaines' program was as follows:

- 1 (a) "By Thy Banks," (b) "Gentle Stour,"—Bryse.
- 2 (a) "Sylolclire,"—Singing; (b) "Rose Softly Blooming,"—Spohr.
3. (a) "Romance,"—Debussy; (b) "Papillon,"—Foudrian.
- "Chanson Indou,"—Rimsky-Korsakoff; "Arriwara,"—Carlson; "Last Hour,"—Kramer; "The Crying of Walter,"—Campbell-Tipton; "The Years at the Spring,"—Beach.

Dance

The regular bi-monthly club dance will be held this evening, Friday, Nov. 12, at the club house. These dances, which are personally chaperoned by the club ladies, are delightfully informal, and furnish an evening of pleasure, under the most wholesome conditions. You are welcome.

Dramatic Section

Delightfully interesting and very much alive was the first meeting of the Drama section which convened in the club parlors on Thursday, Nov. 4, from 3 o'clock to 5. Special attention was given to exercises in proper breathing and voice production, and attractive plans made for the next meeting of the class which will occur on Thursday, Nov. 18, from 3 to 5 p. m.

Art Section

Under the direction of Miss Helen Sadler the Art section met on Thursday, Nov. 4, and started the season's work, which promises to be most novel and attractive, calling for individual application in the working out of beautiful and practical ideas. This section will meet again at 1:30 on the 18th, and students are requested to bring any tin boxes, talcum boxes or candy boxes they would like to decorate.

LOCAL ITEMS

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mix were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wright.

Not an empty store room in Sierra Madre and every business firm doing a good business.

J. W. Strickland has moved his feed business into its new home on North Baldwin avenue.

Armistice day was generally observed here by the business men closing their stores.

Mrs. Palmer Rhodes attended a meeting of the Press Chairmen conference in Los Angeles last week.

Mrs. Frank Hart and son, Karl, are spending the week end at the home of Mrs. W. J. Saunders in Los Angeles.

Mrs. H. Neutzel and Miss Till Neutzel were guests on Armistice day at the home of Mrs. Genevieve Neutzel.

Mrs. F. C. L. Roess was a guest on Tuesday at the program and luncheon given by the Shakespeare club in Pasadena.

Mrs. F. P. Sperry attended a Reciprocity luncheon and program given at Long Beach Tuesday by the Music Study club.

Mrs. L. E. Lyon and daughter, Mrs. C. D. Pettis of New York, were luncheon guests of Mrs. J. F. Sadler on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Olsen arrived home the first of the week from Seattle, Wash., after an absence of several months.

Mrs. John Wamsley of Sedalia, Mo., and Mrs. Charles Lee of Hollywood were guests of Mrs. L. E. Lyon one day last week.

The members of the Wednesday club and their husbands were entertained this week at the home of Mrs. Frank Sawyer in South Pasadena.

The dramatic world enjoys the stories and features of stage life and theater attractions every day in the Los Angeles Examiner. (adv.)

Several additional new residence buildings have been started this week, but not nearly enough. One hundred more buildings in Sierra Madre would find occupants this winter.

Cupid's business increases. 1920 is well over 2000 marriage licenses ahead of 1919 for Los Angeles, according to figures published recently in the Los Angeles Examiner. (adv)

The Reed family, who have been visiting old friends and neighbors in Sierra Madre, have returned to their ranch home at Alspagh, Tulare county, and are busy caring for an immense crop of cotton raised there this season.

A great writer, and worth every cent of the enormous stipend he receives, is Arthur Brisbane, whose news editorials are a big feature each morning of the Los Angeles Examiner. (adv)

Rev. Joshua Jester and wife of Des Moines, Iowa, and daughter, Mrs. Jennie Lee of Pasadena, were dinner guests Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ladd. The Jesters are delighted with the climate of California and no doubt will locate here.

WEBSTER—MAN'S MAN

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," Etc.

Copyright by Peter B. Kyne

"I'LL SEND HER BACK TO THE UNITED STATES."

John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, man's man, thirty-nine years young, boards a train in Death Valley, California, on his way back to civilization after clearing up $100,000. But he looks like a hobo. Then he meets a distressed lady, who makes his heart flop over for the first time in all his days. He eliminates the offending man after the style of the man's man the world over. Being what he is and also girl-shy, he does not take advantage of his opportunity. But he just has to find out who the no-longer-distressed lady is, being determined to hatch up a scheme to meet her again—and marry her. She is Dolores Ruey. Clad in purple and fine linen, John goes to the Engineers' club in Denver, the nearest approach to a home he has known in twenty years. There he is offered a $5,000-a-year job, with the certainty of a fortune, by a capitalist friend, Edward P. Jerome. While he is hesitating, being loath to go to work again so soon, he receives a delayed letter from his own particular pal, Billy Geary, asking him to finance a gold-mining proposition in Central America and go fifty-fifty with him on the profits. Thereupon he turns down the big job and decides to answer the call of friendship and adventure to Sobrante. Jerome goes with John to the depot, trying to get him to change his mind. They meet the distressed lady on her way to the same train. John lifts his hat, but gets the cut direct from the girl, who does not recognize him. John tells Jerome the whole story. Jerome secretly sees the girl and later wires her, offering her $10,000 if she induces John to take his job inside of 90 days. The girl wires acceptance. The scene now shifts to Buenaventura, Sobrante, where Geary, on his uppers, is eating his heart out looking for a cablegram from his old partner.

For two months he had existed entirely because of the leniency of Mother Jenks in the matter of credit. He could not pay her cash, devoutly as he hoped to do some day, and he considered it of the most vital importance that in the interim he should somehow survive. Therefore, in lieu of cash he paid her compliments, which she snapped up greedily.

An inventive genius was Billy. He never employed the same defensive tactics two days in succession, and when personal flattery threatened to fail him, a large crayon reproduction of the late Henry Jenks, which hung over the back bar, was a never-failing source of inspiration.

This was the "sainted 'Enery'" previously referred to by Mother Jenks. He had been a sergeant in Her Britannic Majesty's Royal Horse artillery, and upon retiring to the reserve had harkened to a proposition to emigrate to Sobrante and accept a commission as colonel of artillery with the government forces then in the throes of a revolutionary attack. The rebels had triumphed, and as a result 'Enery had been sainted via the customary expeditious route; whereupon his wife had had recourse to her early profession of barmaid, and El Buen Amigo had resulted.

However, let us return to our sheeps, as Mr. Geary would have expressed it. Seemingly the effect of Billy's compliment was instantly evident, for Mother Jenks set out two glasses and a bottle.

"I know yer a trifter, Willy Geary," she snickered, "but if I do s'y it as shouldn't, I was accounted as 'and some a barmaid as you'd find in Bristol town. I've lost my good looks, what with grief an' worritin' since losin' my sainted 'Enery, but I was 'and some onet."

"I can well believe it, Mother—" dinarily she was wont to breakfast in solitary state. Her table was set for two this morning, however. Billy flipped an adventurous cockroach off the table and fell to with fine appetite.

He was dallying with a special brew of coffee, with condensed milk in it, when the Jamaica negro entered from the cantina to announce Don Juan Cafetero with a cablegram.

"A cablegram!" Mother Jenks cried. "Gord's truth! I'll wager the pub it's for you, Willie. Bob"—turning to the negro, and addressing him in her own private brand of Spanish—"give Don Juan a drink, if he 'asn't helped 'imself while yer back is turned, an' bring the cablegram 'ere."

Within the minute Bob returned with a long yellow envelope, which he handed Mother Jenks. Without so much as a glance at the superscription, she handed it to Billy Geary, who tore it open and read:

"Los Angeles, Cal., U. S. A., August 16, 1913.

"Henrietta Wilkins, Calle de Concordia, No. 19, Buenaventura, Sobrante, C. A.

"Leaving today to visit you. Will cable from New Orleans exact date arrival.

DOLORES."

The shadow of deep disappointment settled over Billy's face as he read. Mother Jenks noted it instantly.

"Wot's 'e got to s'y, Willie?" she demanded.

"It isn't a he. It's a she," Billy replied. "Besides, the cablegram isn't for me at all. It's for one Henrietta Wilkins, Calle de Concordia, No. 19, and who the devil Henrietta Wilkins may be is a mystery to me. Ever have any boarder by that name, Mother?"

Mother Jenks' red face had gone white. "Henrietta Wilkins was my maiden nym, Willie," she confessed soberly, "an' there's only one human being as 'ud cable me or write me by that nym. Gord, Willie, wot's 'e got to s'y, Willie?"

Billy nodded. He had heard the tale before, including the recital of the sainted 'Enery's gallant dash from the blazing palace in an effort to save Don Ricardo's only child, a girl of seven, and of his capture and subsequent execution.

"That ended the revolution," Mother Jenks continued. "But 'ere's something I've never told a livin' soul. Shortly before 'Enery was executed, 'e told me where 'e'd 'id the youngster—in a culvert out on the Malecon; so I 'ired a four-wheeler an' went out an' rescued the pore lamb. I 'id 'er until the harriar of the next fruit steamer, w'en I shipped 'er to New Orleans in care of the stewardess. Hi 'ad 'er put in the Catholic convent there, for as 'Enery said: 'Enrietta, keep an eye on the little nipper, an' do yer damndest to see she's raised a ldy. 'Er father was a gentleman, an' you never want to forget 'e made you Mrs. Colonel Jenks.' So 'He's made a ldy out o' her, Willie: education, planner lessons, paintin', singin', an' deportment. After she graduated from the convent, I 'ad her take a course in the University o' California—New Orleans wasn't healthy for 'er, an' she needed a change o' climate—an' for the last two years she's been teachin' in the 'igh school in Los Angeles."

"And you haven't seen her in all these years?" Geary demanded.

"Not a look, Willie. She's been after me ever since she graduated from the convent to let her come 'ome an' visit me, but 'He's told 'er to wye—that I'd be comin' soon to visit her. An' now, she's wot she's wot! No longer; she's comin' to visit me! Gord, Willie, she's on her w'y!"

"So this cablegram would indicate," Geary observed. "Nevertheless, Mother, I'm at a loss to know why you should feel so cut up over the impending visit."

There was real fear in Mother Jenks' tear-dimmed eyes. "I can't let 'er see me," she wailed. "I wasn't this w'y w'en my sainted 'Enery entrusted the lamb to me; it wasn't until after they executed 'Enery that I commenced to slip—an' now look at me. Look at me, Willie Geary; look at me, I s'y. Wot do yer see? Aw, don't tell me I'm young an' 'andsome, for I know wot I am. I'm a frowzy,

The regular will be held 12, at the which are printed 'Enery's Gallant Dash.

the club lao, disreputable baggage, with mal, and fucation or nothink. All along, sure, underne she's learned to write me a ditions. Ye've been 'Enrietta Wilkins to Delightful I've lied to 'er, Willie. I've much alive r as 'ow 'er fawther, before 'e the Drama te me enough money to hedu the club parlike a ldy—" from 3 o'clock Mother Jenks' grief overcame her, Willie, I ain't respectable, was given 'in' to see me—an' I can't breathing. She musn't know 'ow I got the money for 'er education—sellin' 'er life to a pack of rotten dorgs an' consortin' with the scum of this stinkin' 'ole! Oh, Willie, you've got to 'elp me. I can't 'ave 'er comin' to El Buen Amigo to see me, an' I can't ruin 'er reputation by callin' 'er on in public at the 'otel Mateo. Oh, Gord, Willie, Mother's come a cropper."

Willie agreed with her. He patted the sinful grry head of his landlady and waited for her to regain her composure, the while he racked his agile brain for a feasible plan to fit the emergency.

"She been picturin' me in 'er mind all these years, Willie—picturin' a fraud," wailed Mother Jenks. "If she sees me now, wot a shock she'll get, pore sweetheart—an' 'er the splitin' himage of a hangel. And oh, Willie, while she don't remember wot I looked like, think o' the shock if she meets me! In 'er lawst letter she said as 'ow I was the only hanchor she had in life. Ho, yes. A sweet-lookin' hanchor I am—an' Hi was 'opin' to die before she found out. I've got a hanuerism in my 'eart, Willie, so the surgeon on the mail boat tells me, an' w'en I go, I'll go like—that!" Mother Jenks snapped her cigarette-stained fingers. I'm fifty-seven, Willie, an' since my sainted 'Enery passed away, I 'aven't been no bloomin' hangel. She wrung her hands. "Oh, w'y in 'ell couldn't them harteries 'ave busted in time to save my lamb the 'umiliatin' knowledge that she's be'oldin' to the likes o' me for wot she's got—an' 'ow I got it for 'er."

Billy Geary had a bright idea. "Well," he said, "why not die—temporarily—if you feel that way about it? You could come back from the grave after she's gone."

But Mother Jenks shook her head. "No," she declared. "While Dolores is self-supportin' now, still, if anything 'appened an' she was to need 'elp, 'elp is somethin' no ghost can give. Think again, Willie. Gord, lad, w're's yer brains?"

"Well," Billy countered thoughtfully, "apparently there's no way of heading her off before she takes the steamer at New Orleans, so we'll take it for granted she'll arrive here in due course. About the time she's due, suppose you run up to San Miguel de Padua for a couple of weeks and leave me to run El Buen Amigo in your absence. I'll play fair with you, Mother, so help me. I'll account for every centavo. I'll borrow some decent clothes from Leber the day the steamer gets in; then I'll go aboard and look over the passenger list, and if she's aboard, I'll tell her you closed your house and started for California to visit her on the last north-bound steamer—that her cablegram arrived just after you had started; that the cable company, knowing I am a friend of yours, showed me the message and that I took it upon myself to call and explain that as a result of your departure for the United States it will be useless for her to land—useless and dangerous, because cholera is raging in Buenaventura, although the port authorities deny it—"

"Willie," Mother Jenks interrupted impressively, a ghost of her old debonair spirit shining through her tears, "yer don't owe me a bloomin' sixpence! Yer've syved the day, syved my reputation, an' syved a ldy's peace o' mind. Kiss me, yer precious byby."

So Billy kissed her—gravely and with filial reverence, for he had long suspected Mother Jenks of being a pearl cast before swine, and now he was certain of it.

"I'll send her back to the United States and promise to cable you to await her there," Billy continued. "Of course, we can't help it if you and the cablegram miss connections, and once the young lady is back in the United States, I dare say she'll have to stay there a couple of years before she can save the price of another sea voyage. And in the meantime she may marry—"

"Or that hanuerism may 'ave turned the trick before that," Mother Jenks suggested candidly but joyously. "In course she'll be disappointed, but then disappointment never lays 'eavy on a young 'eart, Willie; an' 'e'm' disappointed at not seein' a person you ain't really acquainted with ain't as bad as some disappointments."

"I guess I know," Billy Geary replied bitterly. "If that cablegram had only been for me! Mother, if my old partner could, by some miracle, manage to marry this Dolores girl, your arteries and your aneurisms might bust and be damned, but the girl would be safe."

"Mybe," Mother Jenks suggested hopefully, "yer might fix it up for her w'en I'm gone. From all haccunts 'e's no-end a gentleman."

"He's a he-man," Mr. Geary declared with conviction. He sighed. "John Stuart Webster, wherever you are, please write or cable," he murmured.

CHAPTER VI.

The ancient bromide to the effect that man proposes but God disposes was never better exemplified than in the case of John Stuart Webster, who, having formulated certain daring plans for the morrow and surrendered himself to grateful slumber in his stateroom aboard the Gulf States Limited, awoke on that momentous morn to a distinct apprehension that all was not as it should be with him. His mouth reminded him vaguely of a bird-and-animal store, and riot and insurrection had broken out in the geometric center of his internal economy.

Webster was sufficient of a jack-leg doctor to suspect he was developing a splendid little case of ptomaine poisoning. He decided to go into executive session with the sleeping-car conductor, who wired ahead for a doctor to meet the train at the next station. And when the sawbones came and pawed Jack Webster over, he gravely announced that if the patient had the slightest ambition to vote at the next presidential election, he should leave the train at St. Louis and enter a hospital forthwith. To this heart-breaking program Webster entered not the slightest objection, for when a man is seriously ill, he is in much the same position as a politician—to-wit: He is in the hands of his friends.

However, life had the habit of going hard with Webster so frequently that fortunately he was trained to the minute, and after three days of heroic battling the doctor awarded Jack the decision. Thereafter they kept him in the hospital ten days longer, "feeding him up" as the patient expressed it—at the end of which period Webster, some fifteen pounds lighter and not quite so fast on his feet as formerly, resumed his journey toward New Orleans.

In the meantime, however, several things had happened. To begin, Dolores Ruey spent two days wondering what had become of her quondam knight of the whiskers—at the end of which period she arrived in New Orleans with the conviction strong upon her that while her hero might be as courageous as a wounded lion when dealing with men, he was the possessor, when dealing with women, of about two per cent less courage than a cottontail rabbit. Being a very human young lady, however, she could not help wondering what had become of the ubiquitous Mr. Webster, although the fact that he had mysteriously disappeared from the train en route to New Orleans did not perturb her one-half so much as it had the disapparee. She had this advantage over that unfortunate man, whereas he did not know she was bound for Buenaventura, she knew he was; hence, upon arrival in New Orleans she dismissed him from her thoughts, serene in abiding faith that sooner or later her knight would appear, like little Bo-Peep's lost sheep, dragging his tail behind him, so to speak.

Dolores spent a week in New Orleans renewing schoolgirl friendships from her convent days in the quaint old town. This stop-over, together with the one in Denver, not having been taken into consideration by Mr. William Geary when he and Mother Jenks commenced to speculate upon the approximate date of her arrival in Buenaventura, resulted in the premature flight of Mother Jenks to San Miguel de Padua, a fruitless visit on the part of Billy aboard the Cacique, of the United Fruit company's line, followed by a hurry call to Mother Jenks to return to Buenaventura until the arrival of the next steamer.

This time Billy's calculations proved correct, for Dolores did arrive on that steamer. The port doctor came aboard, partook of his customary drink with the captain, received a bundle of the latest American newspapers and magazines, nosed around, asked a few perfunctory questions, and gave the vessel pratique.

Dolores observed a gasoline launch shoot up to the landing at the foot of the companion-ladder and discharge a well-dressed, youthful white man. As he came up the companion, the purser recognized him.

"Howdy, Bill," he called. "Hello, yourself," Mr. William Geary replied, and Dolores knew him for an American. "Do you happen to have as a passenger this trip a large, interesting person, by name John Stuart Webster?" added Billy Geary.

"I don't know, Billy. I'll look over the passenger list," and together they moved off toward his office. Dolores followed, drawn by the mention of that magic name Webster, and paused in front of the purser's office to lean over the rail, ostensibly to watch the cargadores in their lighters clustering around the great ship, but in reality to learn more of the mysterious Webster.

"Blast the luck," Billy Geary growled, "the old sinner isn't here. By the way, do you happen to have a Miss Dolores Ruey aboard?"

Dolores pricked up her little ears. What possible interest could this stranger have in her goings or comings?

"You picked a winner this time, Bill," she heard the purser say. "Stateroom sixteen, boat-deck, starboard side. You'll probably find her there, packing to go ashore."

"Thanks," Billy replied and stepped out of the purser's office. Dolores turned and faced him.

"I am Miss Ruey," she announced. "I heard you asking for me." Her eyes carried the query she had not put into words: "Who are you, and what do you want?" Billy saw and understood, and on the instant a wave of desolation surged over him.

"I dare say you passed each other on the road—here, here, Miss Ruey, don't cry."

"ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN."

Once in every woman's life, comes a certain great moment. It will come to you—just as it came to Aurora Meredith. What do you think it is? You'll know when you see this great picture—a play that every woman will understand; an be d—d to yer!"

Also, of Mars," Billy declared, "is a Monkey, or honor than being the wife of a Ah, Mother," he added with a TUES of genuine gratitude and sincerity, "you've been awfully good to me. I don't know what I'd have done without you." He laid his hand on her fat arm. "Mother, one of these days I'll get mine, and when I do I'm going to stake you to a nice little pub back in Bristol."

She smiled at him with motherly tenderness and shook her head. In a concrete niche in the mortuary of the Cathedral de la Vera Cruz the bones of her sainted 'Enery reposed, and when her hour came she would lie beside him.

"Yer a sweet boy, Willie," she told him, "an' I'd trust yer for double the score, s'help me. 'Eving knows I 'aven't much, but wot I 'ave I shares freely with them I likes."

Mother Jenks preceded him into the shady side of the veranda, where or-

LIFE WAS A MISERY TO HER

Says this Woman Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Carrollton, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. If I swept the floor or did any kind of work it would bring my sickness on. I was weak and languid, had no energy, and life was a misery to me. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking twelve bottles I found myself much improved and I took six more. I have never had any more trouble in that respect since. I have done all kinds of work and at present am an attendant at a State Hospital and am feeling fine. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound to dozens of my friends and shall always recommend it."—LILLIAN THARP, 824 S. 6th St., Carrollton, Ky.

No More Misery After Eating

Just Takes An Eatonie

"The first dose of Eatonie did me wonders. I take it at meals and am no longer bothered with indigestion," writes Mrs. Ellen Harris.

Thousands of people, like this dear lady, gratefully testify about Eatonie, which does its wonders by taking up and carrying out the excess acidity and gases which bring on indigestion, heartburn, bloating, belching and food repeating. Acid stomach also causes about seventy other non-organic ailments. Protect yourself. A big box of Eatonie costs but a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

Feet. To dream you bathe your feet denotes trouble in collecting money which is due you. To dream of large or deformed feet foretells a journey which will cost you many tears. To scratch the bottom of your feet denotes treachery and flattery. To have no feet at all is an evil omen; it foretells some great calamity. Cold feet foretells a quarrel with a friend.

Over fifty years ago a young physician practiced widely in a rural district and became famous for his uniform success in the curing of disease. This was Dr. Pierce, who afterwards established himself in Buffalo, N. Y., and placed one of his prescriptions, which he called "Golden Medical Discovery," in the drug stores of the United States so that the public could easily obtain this very remarkable tonic, corrective and blood-maker. Dr. Pierce manufactured this "Discovery" from roots and barks—a corrective remedy, the ingredients of which nature had put in the fields and forests, for keeping us healthy. Few folks or families now living have not at sometime or other used this "Golden Medical Discovery" for the stomach, liver and heart. Over twenty-four million bottles of this tonic and blood remedy have been sold in this country.

Here Wild Birds Are Safe

GOV. JOHN M. PARKER

Louisiana to have 364,000 acres of permanent refuge on the gulf

MRS. RUSSELL SAGE

LOUISIANA, though she looks a gift horse in the mouth when it comes to woman suffrage, knows a good thing in bird life conservation when she sees it. Which is to say that the very same legislature which refused to ratify the Susan B. Anthony amendment took action that gives the Pelican state a vast bird refuge. So, while Louisiana did not help the women to realize their ambition for "votes for women in 1920," she is going to help them keep their swarthy off on wearing alpacas and wild-bird plumage on their hats.

If all the plans go through Louisiana's bird refuge will be a huge one. In any event it's a big one, as such things go. Of course, some of the big national parks with their thousands of square miles of wild-life sanctuary are bigger. But Louisiana's refuge is quite big enough to accomplish its purpose. And geographically it is just exactly where it is needed. It fronts on the Gulf of Mexico, extending back far enough to take in rolling prairie and wooded upland, ideal territory for the preservation and propagation of bird life of various kinds. It lies directly in the paths of migration north and south through the Mississippi valley, up and down which, according to observers of the United States biological survey, passes more than 87 per cent of the migratory game birds that enter the United States from either direction each season.

By this action of the legislature Louisiana became possessed of 164,300 acres through two gifts. One is 85,000 acres in Vermilion parish from the Rockefeller foundation and the other is 79,300 acres, including the famous Marsh Island, from the Russell Sage foundation.

These two tracts were allotted to the state five years ago on the condition that the state conservation department should demonstrate for five years its ability to protect the wild life and to establish breeding places for all the resident birds and for all the visitors from central and South America, Mexico and the north. The conservation department did a good job and wrote Q. E. D. at the end of these five years. Thereupon the two foundations informed the state that they were prepared to turn over the tract in perpetuity. So the legislature passed enabling acts, permitting the state to receive these tracts and to preserve them forever as wild life refuges.

Prior to this legislative action the state of Louisiana had been the recipient of a gift of 57,000 acres in the same part of the state from Charles Willis Ward and John Avery McGlenny. It also had its own refuge of 13,000 acres. So the state is now in possession of 234,300 acres of refuge. This land is worth not less than $10 an acre, at a low estimate.

And this is not all. Gov. John M. Parker, Conservation Commissioner M. L. Alexander and Mr. McIlhenny have a plan to increase the total acreage to 363,000 in one big tract.

The Rockefeller foundation and Ward-McIlhenny tracts are separated by two other tracts. One of the latter is a tract of 43,000 acres, lying in Vermilion parish and owned by the Vermilion Bay company. The other is a tract of 86,000 acres, belonging to several owners. By the addition of these two tracts the big bird refuge would have an unbroken frontage of 75 miles on the gulf.

Commissioner Alexander believes that the next year will see the purchase of these two tracts by the state and their addition to the refuge. It is stated that a majority of the owners of the 86,000 acre tract have agreed to sell to the state for refuge purposes at a price approximating $5 an acre. This is virtually a gift to the state of half the value of the land.

Mr. McIlhenny has been called the "father of wild-life conservation in the south." Apparently he deserves the title. Anyway, it was he who influenced Mrs. Sage to make the Marsh Island purchase.

The first work of the department was to eliminate the market hunters, which was done by means of armed wardens, authorized as deputy sheriffs and marshals, traveling in motor patrol boats equipped with small rapid-fire guns. It was a hard fight. Louisiana has long been the haunt of swarms of market hunters and plumage hunters. Many battles were fought between the wardens and the poachers. The most sensational, possibly, was that in which Rene Sauter fought a three-hour gun battle with six market hunters. The warden was shot in the eye and the lung, but arrested all six lawbreakers. Sauter nearly died, but finally recovered. All six of the poachers are serving terms in state's prison and Marsh Island is free from their kind nowadays.

Soon after obtaining the Russell Sage foundation gift Mr. McIlhenny went again to New York and, with Mr. Ward's assistance, succeeded in persuading the Rockefeller foundation to take action.

But long before Mr. McIlhenny was instrumental in securing these two tracts for the state he was at work on his own particular bird refuge on his plantation of 60,000 acres on Ver-million bay, known as Avery Island. The McIlhennys have a fine old home there on a knoll shaded by great live oaks. H. H. Dunn in the New York Times quotes Mr. McIlhenny in substance as follows, regarding his 40 years of effort in behalf of the preservation of bird life:

JOHN AVERY MCILHENNY

"Back in 1881, when I was living, as now, on Avery Island, I used to be interested in the birds and in the plumage hunters, who, traveling in their long, unwieldy, lateen-sailed luggers, would come into the bayous, the decks of their boats covered with the skins of thousands of American egrets, snow herons, and other birds of beautiful plumage, shorn from the birds in the midst of the breeding season, with whole nests full of young left to perish of hunger and thirst in the broiling sun of the Gulf coast. As I grew older, these birds, once so plentiful, began to disappear, until in 1893 and 1894, I determined to do what I could to save the few remaining birds of the vast flocks which once had fed almost at the doors of the homes of my family on Avery Island.

"Just below the house there was a wet spot—Willow pond—partly covered with willow, buttonwood, sycamore and other water-loving trees and an abundant growth of marsh grasses where each year a constantly decreasing number of pairs of green herons, least bitterns, coots and blackbirds nested. This marsh I increased to a small lake by means of a dam—since those days the dams have been increased five times, until now the pool covers 35 acres—but I am getting ahead of the story.

"Hunting through the marshes much of the spring of 1895 I found two nests of the snowy heron—where there had been hundreds of nests ten years before. The snowy heron, by the way, and the American egret both supply the fairy plumes known as 'alpacas' and so much in demand at that time, when they could be sold legally, for women's headpieces. In each of these nests were four young birds. These I took and put in a large cage I had built at one end of the pond. Soon they would perch on my shoulder and eat out of my hand. In November I set them free.

Next spring six of the eight came back, straight as homing pigeons to the spot where the cage had been. One disappeared, and of the five remaining, two pair reared eight young. The 13 left that fall, and all returned the next March. Five pairs nested, raising 20 young, and so on, year by year, there has been a marked increase, until today there are at least 2,500 pairs—5,000 birds—of these snow herons nesting on Willow pond. I believe this is the only place in North America where these herons nest in any numbers, though I have recently shipped 1,500 pairs of these and of the Louisiana and little blue herons to another wild-life refuge just being established in Florida.

"Today there are also breeding in Willow pond, some 6,000 pairs of little blue herons, 10,000 pairs of Louisiana herons, 300 pairs of green herons, 50 pairs of purple gallinules, 60 pairs of Florida gallinules, 25 pairs of least bitterns, 10 pairs of kingbirds, and so on. "In the course of time, I am sure, this whole 75 miles of gulf coast will have become so completely sanctuary to the wild birds that they will be as tame throughout its 500 square miles as are those in Willow pond."

POINTED OUT BRIGHT SIDE

Optimist's Brave Effort to Convince Afflicted Man That the Cloud Had Silver Lining.

Mr. Juergens had been suddenly afflicted with a stiff neck. Not only was it a painful stiffness, but it caused him to twist his head around until he seemed to be trying to look behind him over his left shoulder, and his head was rigid in that pose.

"Of all the confounded trials a man was ever subjected to," he said, "this is the limit. They say to look on the bright side of our afflictions, but I'd like to know how I could make use of this stiff neck."

"My dear friend," said the optimist, "think what a golden opportunity this is to sit for your picture without having to allow the photographer to twist your head around that way and jab those ice-cold tongs into the back of your neck!"

WHAT THE TEACHER THOUGHT

Comment That Took a Whole Lot of Conceit Out of One Small Boy's Daddy.

"The world is full of fault finders," remarked Professor Pritchard at a dinner recently, "and one of the most common targets is the modern educational system. No more common expression than, 'Well, they used to really teach us something when I went to school.'"

"I have a friend like that, but the other day he told me he was through. It came about in this way. He used to help his little son with his home studies. One evening, as they were about to begin, he asked the little chap what his teacher said regarding his home work.

"She says I'm getting stupider every day," replied the lad, and from then on he had to do his home lessons alone."

Designed Many Yachts

Charles Jackson Paine, Famed as Builder of Successful Defenders of America's Cup.

Recent yachting events between the Resolute and Shamrock accentuate the birthday of Charles Jackson Paine, born August 23, 1833, and died within a few days of his eighty-seventh birthday, four years ago.

Besides being a soldier of distinction in the Civil war, Colonel Paine took an ardent interest in yachting and became a master of yacht designing and sailing. It was in 1885 that he formed the syndicate that built the Puritan, and also served at the head of the committee which had charge of the races of that year. Later he became sole owner of the Puritan, but later sold it to Commodore Forbes.

In 1886 he built the Mayflower, which defeated the Galatea, and the Volunteer, which successfully contested the America's cup with the Thistle.

THE WOMAN'S CLUB

By Mrs. Palmer Rhodes.

Reciprocity Day

The Woman's club will give their Reciprocity Day program and luncheon on Monday, Nov. 8, at 1 p. m. Aside from interesting addresses from a number of presidents of other clubs, a very exceptional musical program will be given by Mlle. DesChaines, soprano, an artiste of rare charm and ability. Since a large number of out of town guests are expected, an informal reception will be held from 12 o'clock to 1 p. m.

Masquerade Ball

The mask ball given by the club on last Friday evening was truly a success from every view point. A brilliant array of costumes of every color and description gave the scene a festive air and attracted a large number of spectators, who seemed much amused by the antics of the maskers. The grand march started at 10 o'clock. Mrs. M. D. Welshe, Mrs. Marian E. Lees and H. T. Bassett acting as judges. The decision on the two most artistic costumes was made in favor of Miss Yerdia Appleby and Mrs. J. Milton Steinberger, and Mrs. Frank Hart of the Villa and Dr. R. H. Mackerras of Pasadena received prizes for having the best comic costumes.

The club house was effectively decorated with Halloween colors, black cats, witches, owls, etc., and a real climax to the spookiness of the affair was given when the lights went out, on account of the storm, and the dance was finished in semi-darkness. Aside from a liberal attendance of Sierra Madrans, a large number of out of town guests were present.

New Crank Case Service for Motorists

YOU probably know that after a few weeks of driving your lubricating oil becomes dirty with carbon, road dust and fine particles of metal, which circulate through your engine and cause unnecessary wear on bearing surfaces. And gasoline escapes past the pistons and dilutes the oil. Granted. There's nothing new about that—but—

Here's an absolutely new way to get rid of this dirty, diluted oil and put your engine in line for better performance and longer life. It is called Modern Crankcase Cleaning Service.

Modern,—because we use Calol Flushing Oil, the new, scientific, thorough flushing agent that does not contaminate the fresh oil.

Our skilled mechanics know how to clean out a crankcase with it correctly and quickly, at a nominal cost to you.

This service assures proper lubrication for your cleaned engine. We refill the crankcase with fresh Zerolene of the correct grade.

We recommend Modern Crankcase Cleaning Service as the latest word for better engine operation and longer life for your car.

TODAY: Bring in your car for Modern Crankcase Cleaning Service.
